Summary

The Agriculture Ministry gave a final extension, to Sunday 11 October 2026, before permanently removing the institutional electricity meter that still serves users in Puerto Armuelles, Chiriqui. Affected residents and businesses must complete their own connection paperwork with Naturgy before then.

Details (summary of the article)

According to TVN Panama, the Ministry of Agricultural Development (MIDA) has granted a final deadline for the definitive removal of the institutional electricity meter that currently supplies users in Puerto Armuelles, Chiriqui province. The cut-off date is now Sunday 11 October 2026, after originally being set for 30 September. MIDA said the extension came in response to requests from residents, businesses and linked institutions, giving those still depending on the institutional meter extra time to complete their paperwork with the distributor Naturgy. The aim is for each user to obtain an independent electricity supply and make the transition in an orderly way. MIDA urged those affected to speed up their applications and comply before the deadline, and thanked users for their cooperation. Boquete residents are not affected directly; the measure concerns Puerto Armuelles in western Chiriqui.
