Summary

Mobile Time reports that after Friday's earthquake Tigo warned residential and business customers of temporary service disruptions caused by power cuts, while +Móvil enabled free Starlink satellite SMS nationwide for 48 hours (9-11 October).

Details (summary of the article)

The trade outlet Mobile Time Latinoamérica reports that mobile services in Panama were affected mainly by power cuts after Friday 9 October's earthquake. Tigo told residential and business customers that their services could suffer temporary interruptions because of the quake and electricity outages in the worst-hit areas; the company said its backup power systems have limited autonomy, so full normalisation depends on electricity being restored. Tigo's technical teams are monitoring the situation and will post updates on official channels. +Móvil, meanwhile, temporarily enabled Starlink Mobile satellite SMS messaging nationwide so customers in places without terrestrial coverage can reach family, available for 48 hours from Friday 9 to Sunday 11 October 2026 on both Android and iOS devices. Both measures are aimed at keeping people connected during the emergency.
