Summary

After structural checks following the 9 October earthquake, UNACHI's main campus in David resumes in-person classes on Monday 19 October, while the Boquete university extension and regional centres continue in blended (semi-presencial) mode.

Details (summary of the article)

Crítica reports that technical and structural evaluations ordered after the earthquake of 9 October have been completed at the Autonomous University of Chiriquí (UNACHI) and the International Maritime University of Panama (UMIP), allowing in-person classes to resume from Monday 19 October. UNACHI announced in a press release that the resumption applies to its Central Campus in David. Its Regional Centres, the Boquete University Extension, and other sites and sub-sites will keep the blended (semi-presencial) arrangement previously agreed by the Academic Council, so Boquete students should continue under that format. UMIP also said its campus buildings are in optimal and safe condition for the return to classes and urged calm. The measures follow weeks of disruption caused by the quake and its aftershocks.
