IDAAN announced scheduled maintenance at water treatment plants and hydraulic systems in several provinces during the week of 2–8 November 2026, with possible low pressure or cuts. El Siglo reports the works include sediment cleaning.

Details (summary of the article)

Panama's national water utility IDAAN has published a schedule of maintenance work on drinking-water plants and hydraulic systems in several provinces for the week of 2 to 8 November 2026, according to El Siglo. The works involve cleaning sediment from tanks and plants, which means some areas will see low pressure or no supply while crews are working. IDAAN advises households in the affected sectors to store water in advance. The report does not list specific Boquete-district sectors, so residents served by IDAAN should check the utility's own channels for the detailed list and timings. Normal service is expected to return gradually once each job finishes.
