Summary

The Chiriqui oral trial court unanimously found Jorge Carracera ('4 Pepas') and Anel Guerra guilty of the 2024 murder of Daniel González and attempted murder of his brother in La Riviera, David Sur; sentencing is pending.

Details (summary of the article)

A three-judge panel of the Chiriqui Oral Trial Court in David unanimously convicted Jorge Carracera, 23, alias '4 Pepas', and Anel Guerra, 36, of aggravated homicide and attempted aggravated homicide, as reported by Mi Diario. The verdict followed five days of hearings in which more than 80 pieces of evidence were weighed, including testimony, expert reports and physical evidence. The crime took place on 5 August 2024 in the La Riviera housing development in David Sur, where 24-year-old Daniel González, known as 'Danielito', was shot dead while working on a construction site. His brother Gabriel González, 29, alias 'Gabrielón', was wounded in the chest and right arm and taken by police to the Rafael Hernández Regional Hospital. Prosecutors argued Carracera fired the shots while Guerra acted as an accomplice by driving him away in a taxi, with the motive linked to long-running feuds between criminal groups in the Los Abanicos sector. Sentencing remains pending; the homicide prosecutor's office has asked for the maximum penalty, between 20 and 30 years in prison.
