Details (summary of the article)

Boquete hosted the second edition of the Ministry of Social Development (MIDES) Youth Innovation and Entrepreneurship Fair, reported by En Segundos Panama. More than 1,035 young people attended and over 90 projects were exhibited, spanning artificial intelligence, robotics, 3D printing, technology, gastronomy and science; several were aimed at health, soil improvement, environmental protection and care for older adults. The programme combined exhibitions with training sessions and mentoring led by nine specialists, covering startup finance, marketing, social media, company formation and permits, sales strategy and branding. A 'university village' area let attendees explore degree options in technology and innovation. Social Development Minister Beatriz Carles de Arango said talent is not limited to the capital and urged young people to start ventures without fearing failure. The first edition was held at Ciudad del Saber; ministry officials and local Chiriqui authorities accompanied the minister at the Boquete event.
