MiAmbiente is preparing 66 protected areas nationwide, which include Chiriquí parks such as Volcán Barú and La Amistad, to receive visitors during the November patriotic holidays.

Full text (English)

According to Infobae, Panama's environment authorities are getting 66 protected areas ready to receive tourists during the November fiestas patrias holiday period. The measure covers national parks and reserves across the country, among them the highland parks near Boquete that are popular with hikers. Visitors are generally expected to follow park rules, register at entrances and heed weather and trail conditions, which matter especially now with ongoing rain alerts. Details on which areas are open and any entry requirements are in the Infobae report.
