El Siglo reports that the Agricultural Marketing Institute (IMA) is holding agro-fairs from 8:00 a.m. at various sites including Chiriquí; shoppers need only their ID card and a reusable bag.

Details (summary of the article)

The newspaper El Siglo reports that the Instituto de Mercadeo Agropecuario (IMA), together with the national government, is running agro-fairs in the provinces of Panamá, Colón, Chiriquí and Los Santos. Sales start at 8:00 a.m. at each location, offering food baskets at subsidised prices. To buy, residents need only their cédula (ID card) and a reusable bag. The article lists the specific sites for each province; exact dates and Chiriquí locations are given in the published list, so readers should check the link for the point nearest them. These fairs are the IMA's regular mechanism for lowering the cost of staple foods.
