Summary

Metro Libre profiles David, Chiriquí's commercial hub, and the investment plans drawing large retailers to the city nearest Boquete.

Details (summary of the article)

The outlet Metro Libre describes the district of David, founded in 1602, which has around 82,907 residents spread over 12 corregimientos. The article presents David as an inter-provincial logistics hub driven by wholesale and retail trade, construction and banking. New infrastructure, such as the seafood market in Pedregal, is cited as part of the push attracting larger commercial players. For Boquete residents, David remains the main shopping, banking and services destination, so further retail growth there is of practical interest. The piece gives no specific dates for new store openings.
